A Grandmother's Tea.

A hostess who is ever thinking of how to give pleasure has issued invitations to eight guests, who are all the proud grandmothers of one or more children. Each person has been you wonder at the bad dreams that requested to come prepared to relate stories of the wonderful doings and sayings of these children, and the hostess says she expects to collect enough anecdotes and elever happenings to keep her 'n stock for the rest of the season. The table is to be set with an old-fashioned castor in the center, with nosegays of geraniums and white tea roses at either and The menu is to consist of pressed chicken, garnished with hard boiled eggs, potato croquettes, small sweet pickles, jelly, hot baking powder blscuits, with cup custard and sponge rake for dessert. Ten is to be the beverage. Gold band china will be used and a bouquet of pansies and a rose geranium leaf will be at each

A Pre-Nuptial Luncheon.

This charming affair was given recently for a bride-elect. The table was a dream. In the center, to simulate a lake, was an oblong mirror surrounded by smilax and trailing vines. On this lake white swans floated, holding in their beaks narrow green ribbon which radiated to the place of each quest, where a swan was fastened to the place card. These birds had a box under the wings, large enough to contain the salted almonds. Pale green candles were also at each plate in glass holders. In the beak of each swan was the smallest of envelopes, scaled with a gilt heart. The card inclosed bore the names of the engaged couple. Celery soup with chopped parsley sprinkled over the top was served first, then creamed sweet breads in heartshaped pastry shells, Saratoga potatoes, hot rolls, white grape and nut salad, pistachio ice cream in form of hearts, with an arrow of white, and individual heart cakes completed this green and white luncheon. Creme de menthe was passed in the drawingroom afterwards and all gave toasts to the honored guest.

The hostess wore white with green trimmings. A pretty feature was the cushion between the two linen cov-crowning the bride with a wreath of ere and lace them together with pale tayrtle for good luck, and she gave pink ribbon, running it through the tach maid a pink garter to wear for a year to bring success in all affairs of bows of ribbon at top and bottom.

MADAME MERRI.

A New Style. -

Artificial and ribbon flowers will now have to take a back seat in favor of a new style that has made as appearance in the New York shops. The new ones are made from Japanese palm fibre, and are so natural in appearance that it is quite impossible to tell them from the real article. This is particularly the case with carentions and American Beauty roses, for a further resemblance to nature is added by their being perfumed like their natural prototypes. So far as the expense goes, they cost but little more than the natural flowers.

For Itching Scalp.

Making a Religion of Inhalations of Fresh Air.

Would you grow strong? Breathe deeply.

Would you feel well? deeply, admonishes Mme, Hebe

Do you care to keep young in ap pearance and feeling? Breathe deeply; yes, breathe deeply, but unless the air you breathe is pure it will avail you little. Cultivate the habit of enjoying deep breaths of pure air and you will soon find yourself unable to tolerate a close room.

We should rise from healthful along refreshed, cheerful and ready for our day's work, but many of us, on the contrary, open our eyes tired, dull, headachy, gloomy, or irritable, and all because of the air we have taken into our lungs all night. Frequently the air is already foul from the room having been used all day, yet we close windows and doors and light a lamp or gas, which many of us burn all night.

What wonder, then, that we What unrefreshed and half-sick? wonder that our skins are an unhealthy color, our complexions mudly and thick, our eyes heavy, our heads dull Why do we persist in subjecting ourselves nightly to the poisonous influence of a close, unventilated room?

There are several reasons given and by otherwise sensible and educated people, too, the predominant ones being "fear of draughts," "fear of night air," and "dread of getting up in the morning in a cold room." The excuse for the lamp or gas which we let burn all night is symply our "natural dislike for darkness.

Now, do you realize that a lamp or gaslight absorbs oxygen and throws off carbonic acid gas very much the same as you do yourself? Place a lighted candle under an inverted glass iar, taking care to prevent any fresh supply of air to reach the light, and watch the result. After the flame has consumed most of the oxygen it will fail, for even a candle cannot live in poisonous air, though it was thatf the agent that worked the barm.

Agnin, do you know that you use up about 500 cubic feet of air an hour and that in a room ten feet square the air is unfit for you to use in about two hours? Think what a veritable poison box it must become before the night is over, especially you have burned the gas as well. pursue you sleeping and the dull pains and great weariness that greet you on waking?

And the remedy is so simple. window open an inch or two top and bottom will insure a constant change of air all night. The very best air Is to be had at night.

FOR WORK ON CANVAS.

Berlin Wool, Filosele, or Tapestry Wool May Be Used and Herringbone Stitch Applied.

Herringbone stitched applied as a filling for canvas is a decided novelty; It makes a splendid firm border or stripe, or may be used for an all-over design. It is worked with two colors, and the fact of the long part of the stitches being double in places, make it very strong. The actual working is clearly seen from the illustration, Berlin wool, filoselle, or tapestry wool may be used.

FOR BORI

Design for Pincushion.

A very dainty little pincushion can be made by cutting two heart-shaped pleces of linen, enough larger than your cushion to leave a border an inch and a half wide on every side. Line these pieces with pink lawn, and in the center of the upper one embraider a small design in eyelet and solid work. Make a row of eyelets on both pieces of linen in the shape of a heart. When the embroidery is finished place the cushion between the two linen coveyelets and finishing the whole by

A Good Shampoo.

A good shampoo is made of the following ingredients: One-half ounce of borax, one-quarter ounce blearbonate of soda, one-half drachm of camphor, one-quarter ounce of glycerine, one pint of rose water, and one ounce of alcohol. The camphor should first be dissolved in alcohol, and the rest of the ingredients then added, having been first thoroughly mixed.

Care of the Hair.

All hair if properly cared for will be beautiful, even though the color may not be just what you would like. The hair should be carefully shampooed every ten days, using the green soap mixture for the purpose. Then dry the hair in the sun and rub on a good hair tonic. The hair tonic should also be applied each night, rubbing it well into the scalp with the finger tips.

Dandruff.

There is no positive cure for dun-druff, but absolute cleanliness will keep it from being objectionable.
